

“I Am Listening” 1: Samuel 3: 1-10

God speaks to us in many ways. As I was going through my folders I came across the theme and Bible Reference for the November Search Retreat. The timing could not have been better once again I was questioning if my prayers were being heard. Some of you know that we lost our first Grandson, Tyce Daniel he was born premature on August 6, 2006 the Feast of the Transfiguration.

For the past four years we have prayed that God would again bless Dave and Larissa with another miracle another baby or babies. That has not happened as of yet so in my humanness I find myself wondering and questioning and asking “why is it Lord that they still have not been blessed with the miracle that we pray for time and again? Yes it is true that His ways are not our ways.

Today’s Readings and Gospel tells us to persevere in prayer and in all we do. Although we continue to persevere God does not always answer in the ways we want. This at times can be very difficult to understand or even to accept. We need to continue to have faith and to trust Him completely.

Tyce Daniel is our “little Angel” he remains in our hearts we think of him each and every day. We thank God for the miracle of Tyce.

We do have a second grandson who now is 2, Jack Thomas who lives in LA. As far as we are concerned that is way too far but it seems his mommy and daddy like it there for reasons I can not figure out.

We will continue to pray that Dave and Larissa are again blessed with yet more miracles of life. We also will continue to pray for understanding to TRUST and HOPE and accept His will.

We all need to pray for world peace, an end to abortion, for those who are ill or unemployed. There are so many that need our prayers it is the BEST that we can do for each other. God knows the needs even if we don’t. Continue to hold those you know and those you don’t in prayer. God will hear and He will answer.

God Bless & know that you too are in our prayers. Colleen-☺
